

Understanding Behaviour

Conducting a Functional Behavioural Assessment for People Using Unwanted Behaviours

Overview

We all use behaviours we would prefer not to be using ... if we want the behaviour to change we must first understand "why" this behaviour is being used!

All behaviour happens for a reason ... no matter how unwanted or unacceptable the behaviour is, IT IS HAPPENING FOR A REASON. This reason must first be identified if we want positive behaviour change to occur. This course aims to support people to look at behaviour in isolation of the person and be objective by investigating & identifying the reason for certain behaviour. You will be taught a scientific yet user friendly behaviour investigation tool enabling you to "Understand Behaviour used by self and other people". Behaviour is often used to describe who a person is but if we learn to understand behaviour as "a form of expression and often as a coping strategy" we will be able to learn to understand that behaviour is not who a person is; rather what a person is doing. Understanding behaviour is not an "excuse" or "allowance" for unwanted behaviour rather an identification of "WHY" the behaviour is being used ... the REASON! Functional Behaviour Assessment is a process that aims to look beyond the behaviour itself, enabling supporters to identify all factors associated with the occurrence of an unwanted behaviour. The objective information gained from a Functional Behaviour Assessment is used to support positive behaviour change.

Objectives

This programme is designed for attendees to gain an understanding of behaviours used by self or other people using a scientific behaviour assessment model!

Functional Behaviour Assessment is a worldwide recognised assessment tool that when used as a first step supports positive behaviour change. Fobic advocates that you must first understand behaviour and then use this information to develop behaviour change strategies.

Note: behaviour change strategies are covered in our course "Changing Behaviour". These two courses complement each other but it is not essential to do both!

Course participants will leave equipped with the knowledge of all the required steps to conduct a Functional Behavioural Assessment in their work, community or home setting ... thus leave with a view of UNDERSTANDING BEHAVIOUR
